Zinniaville/ Rustenburg – The South African constitutional dispensation, incorporating within it a very sophisticated and highly regarded human rights framework, has been central to the structural transformation of the South African society. A great deal of South African history has been characterised by violence and intimidation as a means through which conflict was resolved and laws were enforced. Recently, residents of Zinniaville (North-East part), consisting mostly of widows, pensioners, the elderly as well as disabled individuals experienced the FULL FORCE of the law on Tuesday and Wednesday this week. Inherent in the South African Constitution is the recognition that the integrity and the dignity of the individual and the community as a whole, must be advanced, and that the state is under a general obligation to adopt measures to protect the individual from threats that impact on the integrity and the dignity of that individual. This is not what this peace-loving Indian community of ours experienced on Wednesday. Moreover, Wednesday was a Islamic Holy day, Eid-u-Adgha, Day of Sacrifice. It was turned upside down by an invasion of Police members, municipal officials and heavy duty machinery. The Indian community have (out of pure desperation), installed access control measures in this Zinniaville segment due to repeatedly falling victim to heinous crimes such as armed robbery, house break-ins, serious assault as well as rape. This last effort of theirs' was destroyed and bulldozed to the ground... bringing an end to the way they thought best of combating crime. Over the past few years Zinniaville has fallen prey to different forms of violence and their inability to take measures to counter this issue, has left the community scarred. They live in constant fear.
